THREE AUTOS IN COLLISION; ONE FOOD FOR FLAMES

No One Badly Hurt in Accident at Hess Corners Sunday

One automobile was destroyed by fire and two others were badly damaged in a wreck which took place at Hess' Corners on the Lincoln Highway west of Dixon about 12 o'clock last night. That none of the occupants of either of the three cars was seriously injured or probably killed is miraculous. A Ford sedan owned by Tom Peters of this city was completely destroyed by fire after it had turned over on the paving at the corner, which has been the scene of a score of accidents.

A Chrysler sedan and a Nash touring car, in which were a party of vaudeville performers who were returning to Chicago from Sterling, were damaged. The former car, which was owned and driven by Frank Bruce, Chicago real estate dealer, was practically demolished in the crash. The Nash touring car owned and driven by his brother, John R. Bruce, also a member of the real estate firm, both vaudeville performers, was damaged to a considerable extent, but was driven to Dixon on its own power. None of the occupants of either of the three cars was seriously injured aside from a general shaking up, slight cuts and bruises.

Blamed Bright Lights.

Mr. Peters was driving west on his way to Sterling with Miss Katherine McDonald of this city and Wilbur Cushman and Miss Marie Fritts of Sterling as occupants of the car. The two Chicago cars besides their owners, carried vaudeville performers who were returning to Chicago after playing an engagement at the Illini theater in Sterling.

Bright lights were given as the cause of the accident. The Nash touring car, it was said, had its lights dimmed and was on its side of the highway. The Chrysler sedan followed close behind and was said to have been crowding the black line and the driver failed to dim his lights. Another car was entering the highway from the north, just west of the Hess filling station. The confusion from the bright lights of the two cars confused the driver of the Dixon car and in an effort to avoid a collision, he struck the rear fender of the Nash car and the force of the impact threw the Ford against the Chrysler. Mr. Peters carried no insurance on his car and experienced a total loss.

While members of the vaudeville troop assisted the Dixon couple from the front seat of the overturned car, which was burning, Cushman forced a hole in the top of the overturned car through which he and his companion crawled and were assisted from the burning machine.

Three Boy Bandits Had Fatal Fight With Police

Quincy, Ill., Feb. 8—(AP)—Investigation today indicated that the three boy bandits who held up two taxi drivers at Hannibal, Mo., early Sunday and later engaged in a gun battle with police, were implicated in several robberies in western and central Illinois. Lawrence Gebhardt, 22, was killed and Horace Phillips, 20, was wounded and arrested in the fight. Jesse McClain, alias Arthur Woods, 22, escaped. Loot found on the men tends to connect them with the robbery of the Fred Kiem grocery store here Saturday night and the E. Garm clothing store in Beardstown, last December.

McClain and Phillips are paroled convicts, and all three had been employed at the Illinois Soldiers' & Sailors' home here. McClain shot and killed a fellow employe several months ago but was exonerated by a coroner's jury.

DRAG RIVER FOR PATIENT AT STATE HOSPITAL AFTER HE THREATENED TO SUICIDE

Walked Into River After Quarrel With Ward Mate

Employes at the Dixon state hospital were dragging Rock river near the institution grounds today in an effort to locate the body of 18 year old Henry Huser, an epileptic patient whose home is in Mascoutah, Ill, and who is believed to have suicided while in a fit of anger following an altercation with a fellow patient, Raymond Willoughby, which occurred about 4:30 Sunday afternoon.

The two patients, who were housed in the same ward in the epileptic colony, engaged in a quarrel, following which Huser is said to have told other patients that he was going to kill himself and started away. The matter was reported to the attendant of the ward who dispatched other patients to bring Huser back. The young man started directly from the scene of the altercation toward the river and is reported to have stripped off his coat, which he threw on the bank, to have concealed his cap under a piece of ice, and to have waded out into the swift current. One of the patients reported having seen Huser in the water.

The current was very swift at the point where he entered the cold water, hindering considerably the dragging operations. A boat and the drag hooks from the police station were secured this morning and a force of employes began dragging the river for the body. The swift current and the heavy ice, which is breaking up, endangered the searchers, but an open space in the river a short distance below where he was last seen, was being dragged today.

STERLING YOUTHS NEAR DEATH AS AUTO TURNS OVER

Driver Narrowly Escaped Fatal Hurts in Accident

Five Sterling high school students were cut and bruised in an automobile accident on route 2 Saturday night as they were passing through the village of Henkel on their way to Mendota to attend a basketball game. The car, a seven passenger Hudson touring, was completely demolished, when it ploughed into an embankment just before crossing the Illinois Central track.

Henry Heiss, Jr., was driving the car and in entering the village of Henkel became confused after leaving the paving and while watching for the dangerous railroad crossing. He sustained deep cuts about the face and neck, one of these narrowly missing the juglar vein. The other occupants, Elmer Brown, Charles Sprinkle, Arthur Manfield and John Kennedy were also cut and bruised. All were taken to the Mendota hospital where their wounds were dressed. Four of the party returned to their homes Saturday night, but the driver's injuries necessitated his remaining in the hospital until yesterday afternoon when he was taken to his home in Sterling.

Mother Gave Food to Her Babes; is Dead

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 8—(AP)—Destitution and want following the long strike of miners have been reported from all parts of the anthracite coal region for several weeks, but the first case of actual starvation was revealed yesterday when the death of Mrs. Mary Harrington at Ashland, wife of a striking miner, was investigated. Deputy Coroner Sener said he was convinced that her death was due to starvation.

Mrs. Harrington's husband had left the coal field to find employment elsewhere. What little food she had received, Mr. Sener said, was obtained from a soup kitchen and this had been given to her children, one of which was only five months old. The coroner said the woman had been too proud to ask aid.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, returned to the anthracite belt today. He established headquarters in this city and planned to make a tour of the region, delivering a series of addresses.

CHURCHES UNITE IN THREE "PRE-LENTEN" SERVICES

Dr. S. P. Long of Chicago, to be Speaker at Big Union Meetings

The ten congregations in Dixon that are cooperating in the union addresses to be delivered by Dr. S. P. Long of Chicago this week, in the St. Paul's Lutheran Church, have every reason for complete confidence and satisfaction in the prospect for three wonderful lectures. On all sides have been heard congratulations from those who have heard and know Dr. Long. "A big, strong, level-headed, unsensational but tremendously in-earnest minister of the Gospel, whose record is high and growing higher," summarizes the testimony.

S. P. LONG

One prominent churchman in Ogle County, speaking to a Dixon pastor, said: "I am certainly glad you are having Dr. Long. I never saw him, but after hearing his sermon over my radio the other evening, I wrote him that it was the best I ever heard in my life; and the next day I noticed in The Telegraph that you are having him for your Pre-Lenten Lectures in Dixon. I shall certainly come down to hear him."

Of course this Ogle County man was forced to explain that he had not heard quite all the Ogle preachers, and only a few in Dixon! But his world is assuring, anyhow.

Dixon residents who love the Gospel Story and are concerned that the world shall experience the healing of its Great Physician, or those who would learn of the foundations for Christians' Faith are urged not to miss a single one of the three addresses, if possible. The first will be tomorrow evening, 7:30, subject, "Why Observe Lent?"

PROTECTED NEGRO ATTACKER OF GIRL WITH ARMED GUARD

Delaware City an Armed Camp During Trial of Black Fiend

BULLETIN

Georgetown, Del., Feb. 8—(AP)—Determined to get into the court house after the afternoon session of the trial of Harry Butler, negro, charged with criminally assaulting a ten year old girl of Bridgeville, on January 21, two thousand persons, mostly men, made a rush in an effort to storm the building this afternoon.

The crowd was breaking down the barbed wire fence protecting the building when, after efforts at pacification failed, it was resisted with tear bombs thrown by soldiers from the court house.

Captain Marvil of Laurel, adjutant at the military headquarters, here talked to the crowd, telling them that all who could be admitted would be allowed in at the proper time. He begged them to get back. Similar action was taken by Major Duncan, the commanding officer.

The requests were unheeded, whereupon soldiers donned gas masks and hurled tear bombs from the upper windows of the court house. About twenty or thirty bombs were thrown.

The crowd quickly scattered, some persons being slightly injured. After the fumes had passed off, the crowd was back at the wire again but a little less emphatic, hoping for a chance to get into the building and hear the trial.

At 1:30 o'clock court recessed until 2:30 p. m. The soldiers were on duty as the result of a proclamation issued by Governor Robinson when threats of lynching were made against Butler.

Georgetown, Del., Feb. 8.—(AP)—With the court house square transformed into an armed camp by three batteries of the Delaware National Guard, this little town, county seat of Sussex, presented a war-like appearance today for the trial of Harry Butler, negro, accused of an offense against a 12-year-old white girl.

Troopers stood guard outside a six foot barbed wire fence hastily built around the court house last night. A machine gun manned by a crew from New Castle, was mounted on a tower that commands entrances to the building. Fifteen other machine guns were planted at strategic points about the structure. Admission could be gained only by a special pass.

Just Like Military Camp

The anti-aircraft batteries of Wilmington and of Dover has been armed with hand grenades, mustard gas and tear bombs in addition to rifles. The quarters of the commanding officer, Adjutant General Ellison, were set up in the court house. Outside the town a squadron of state police patrolled the highways to prevent congregation of citizens and an additional 20 state troopers were held in reserve at a nearby hotel.

Meanwhile the little girl lies in a serious condition in the hospital at Milford suffering from seven skull fractures received when the negro clubbed and assaulted her near her home at Bridgeville, January 21. The negro has confessed, police say.

The crime aroused intense indignation throughout lower Delaware and a mob of 500 men searched three jails in an effort to lynch the negro the night of the crime.

Much bitterness has been aroused among the townspeople because of the calling out of troops for they believe the town itself coud have handled the situation.

PROBE OF FOODS PRODUCT MERGER IS THOUGHT NEAR

Dept. of Justice to Look Into Several Such Concerns

Washington, Feb. 8—(AP)—The federal courts were asked by the government today to prevent formation of "a huge combination in the baking industry" by the Ward interests and others.

In an anti-trust suit filed in Baltimore, the government named the General Baking, Continental Baking and United Bakeries interests as linked with the Ward Companies in the enterprise. An injunction was requested.

Washington, Feb. 8—(AP)—Action by the Department of Justice in connection with recently effected or proposed mergers in the bread and food products industries, is believed to be in imminent prospect. Whether the move would relate to the newly organized Ward Food Products Corporation of New York or to another branch of the baking industry has not been disclosed and department of justice officials decline to discuss the subject.

The department has asked the Federal Trade Commission, however, for information it has gathered in its investigation of the food products field, supposedly in preparation for legal action. The commission for some time has been inquiring into the baking industry as a whole and last week directed a special investigation into the new Ward Corporation. It was said the general baking inquiry was not yet completed, but members of the commission would not reveal the exact course to be taken by the Department of Justice.

Old Sunday Blue Law Hits Tennesseeans

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 8.—(AP)—A Sunday blue law, 123 years old, kept motorists at home, closed cigar stores and other establishments in part of the state yesterday while other sections reported business as usual.

Sixteen persons were cited in Nashville for violation of the law which provided a forfeiture for "any merchant, tradesman, farmer or any other persons found guilty of doing or exercising any of the common avocations of life, or of causing or permitting the same to be done by his children or servants—acts of real necessity or charity excepted."

Among those receiving citations here was J. G. Stahlman, executive director of the Nashville Banner; Luke Lea, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean; J. P. Brown, manager of the Nashville Railway & Light Co., and managers of gasoline stations, news stands, candy and cigar stores and bootblack parlors.

Other cities reported various attitudes as to the law.

HOLD YOUTH FOR MURDER OF GIRL IN AUTO BATTLE

Body of Unidentified Young Woman Found in Snow Bank

New York, Feb. 8—(AP)—Charles Mitchell was arrested in Bellvue Hospital today, where he had gone for treatment for a bullet wound, charged with causing the death of a young unidentified woman whose body was found on a snow bank in East 54th Street, a few hours earlier.

Mitchell, who is 28 years old, confessed, according to police, but declined to tell how he received his injuries.

The police say Mitchell and another man, whose name has not been revealed, were with the young woman last night in an automobile when a quarrel was started ending in a gun fight.

Mitchell, police say, pushed the man out of the car and then, in order to prevent the woman from telling the story, shot her twice.

Body Found in Snow

The body of the well dressed unidentified young woman with bobbed auburn hair, who had been shot to death, was found today by a policeman on a snow bank at 54th Street and Avenue A.

There was a bullet wound in the right temple, another in the breast and her nose was fractured.

The police are inclined to believe the crime was committed elsewhere and that the body was tossed on the pile of snow from an automobile.

The woman apparently was about 23 years old.

Later the police said the woman apparently was killed because she gave testimony in a criminal case.

Part of a torn typewritten paper found in her clothing, they said, indicated she had been murdered for revenge. The contents of the letter were withheld.

Body Found in Snow Not that of Russ Princess

Moscow, Fb. 8—(AP)—Investigation by The Associated Press today proved that the body of the woman found in the snow in one of Moscow's principal streets last Saturday was not that of Princess Obolensky as reported by the police at the time, but that of Helen Vassiliviene Dubinskay, a native of Vladimir province. Finger print examinations made at the morgue by the authorities confirmed this fact.

The chief of the Moscow police explained to the correspondent that the mistake in identity was due to the fact that both the Princess and Mme. Dubinskay appeared in the police records as drug addicts, both were reported missing and there was marked resemblance between the two.

Concrete Slab Removed From Grave to Get at Body

Parral, Mexico, Feb. 8—(AP)—The headless body of Francisco "Pancho" Villa, notorious bandit and rebel, chieftain, whose cement sepulchre was torn open by ghouls Friday night, may be the silent accuser of Emil Halmdahl, American soldier of fortune, and a Mexican, Alberto Corral, said to be of Los Angeles.

Halmrahl, reputed to have been a guide for General Pershing's expedition into Mexico, in chase of Villa, and Corral are in jail here while authorities are trying to learn what was done with Villa's head, which the grave robbers cut off and took. No satisfactory explanation has been ascribed for the decapation, although a note left with the body said the head was to be sent to Columbus, N. M., scene of the bandit raid in 1916, which resulted in the American punitive expedition.

Many here, however, believe the head was stolen for surreptitious sale to some institute for scientific study.

Claimed to be Hunters

Little is known yet of the circumstances resulting in the arrest of Halmdahl and Corral. They are said to have maintained they were here on a hunting trip.

Investigators have taken their lead from a reported inquiry recently by an American as to the exact location of Villa's grave.

Conditions about the grave offered small aid to solution of the mystery, except that it must have taken a number of men to dislodge the concrete covering the slab. Liquor bottles and corks smelling of pungent chemicals found near the grave are unaccounted for. The body was left partly exposed, apparently having been moved only enough for the decapators to do their work.

Villa was buried here in 1923, following his death at the hands of disgruntled henchmen.

BLAME JOHNSON FOR MURDER OF GLENN ELLYNIAN

Evidence Implicates Dead Bandit With Crime June 14

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 8—(AP)—Evidence which has come into the hands of State's Attorney Chauncey Reed of Du Page county indicates, he said today, that Otto Johnson, 51, the burglar who confessed as he died, that he had shot to death on December 12, Henry Jeske, 35 and his wife and son at their farm home near Batavia, was also the murderer of Ivan Blake, 32, of Glen Ellyn June 14 last.

Blake was killed as he sat in a parked automobile on a lonely road with Miss Frances Schuester, also of Glen Ellyn. After killing Blake, the murderer shot Miss Schuester in the face then attacked her.

In sorting out loot that Johnson had concealed under the floor of his room in Joliet, police found cards bearing the name Mary Blake. Blake's wife's name is Muriel but numerous persons knew her as Mary. The state's attorney believes that Johnson got the Mary Blake cards out of Blake's clothes and that if the cards were not those of Mrs. Blake they were those of a relative of the slain man.

The place where the killer set upon Blake and Miss Schuester is in the heart of the district which Johnson told Joliet police he had roamed for months, robbing as he went. Johnson also told that he had killed several others besides the Jeskes, but that he did not know their identities. He admitted over 100 burglaries in this territory. Portions of the loot he had not disposed of has been claimed by scores of persons.

SPEECH DELIVERED BY MUSSOLINI MAY BRING DIFFICULTY

Held by Many to be Equivalent to War Declaration

Berlin, Feb. 8.—(AP)—There is much perturbation and no little ill feeling in Germany over the speech delivered Saturday afternoon in the Chamber of Deputies in Rome by Premier Mussolini with regard to an anti-Italian campaign alleged to have been propagated by Germans in the upper Adiage.

Although the German government has made no reply, pending receipt of the text of the speech, the utterances of Mussolini are considered the strongest used by any statesman since the war toward a country with which his country is at peace.

Mussolini's address is regarded as having been occasioned by a recent speech of Dr. Held, the Bavarian premier, who requested all good Germans to help their fellow countrymen in southern Tyrol, which was awarded Italy by the Treaty of St. Germain.

Point Out Threat

Particular attention is being paid to Mussolini's threat after characterizing the alleged German anti-Italian campaign as "nefarious, ridiculous and lying," that "some times it is necessary to pay with two eyes for the loss of one, and with a whole set of teeth for the loss of one tooth." His remark that "Fascist Italy can, if necessary, carry further beyond its Tri-color, but never lower it," is regarded in some quarters as a direct threat that the Italians may move further in Austrian territory, if such a step should be considered necessary. Mussolini at the time was referring to the Italian position at the Brenner pass which is on the Austro-Italian frontier and the shortest route from central Germany into Italy.

The perturbation here has been increased by the receipt of comment from the Italian newspapers, some of which assert that Mussolini's words were almost equivalent to a declaration of war against Germany.

A move to recall the Italian ambassador is interpreted as an expression of Italy's distrust of Germany and Mussolini's challenge is viewed as an inauspicious omen for Germany's entry into the League of Nations.

Alcohol Thieves Worked Under Headlight's Glare

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 8—(AP)—The Rock Island freight train which was raided by alcohol thieves last Friday morning near Henry, was stalled for an hour and ten minutes and the raiders were aided in their work by the glare from the headlight of a passenger train which was brought to a halt when the engineer of the freight was permitted to enter his cab and whistle a warning, according to John Blankenhorn, engineer of the train held up.

Several automobiles passed along the road during the robbery but the drivers were ordered by armed men to keep moving, Blankenhorn said. There were about 75 cars in the train and the air hose was cut about ten cars from the caboose, he said.

"Before I could see what the trouble was some one stuck a revolver in my back and ordered me, Fireman Coburn and a rookey brakeman to throw up our hands," he said.

Leaving St. Louis to drive to Fulton, Ky., they took the wrong road, they said, and stopped the men in a small automobile to inquire about roads. The men held them up, tore a string of pearls valued at $200 from Mrs. Heghauer's neck and took a $700 diamond ring from her finger. FORMER PASTOR OF DIXON CHURCH TO BE HERE TUESDAY

Dr. H. H. Peters Will Attend Rally at Local Church

Of the two leaders of to-morrow's rally in the Dixon Christian church, Dr. H. H. Peters of Bloomington, General Secretary for the Illinois Christian Missionary Society, is well known as ex-pastor, evangelist, dedicator, and overseer of churches' welfare everywhere in the state. Mr. Flewelling of St. Louis is a new man, having lately engaged as Field Worker in Illinois for the United Christian Missionary Society. He is a graduate of Hiram College, receiving his Master's degree therefrom in '13. His three pastorates at Ashtabula and Collinswood Church, Cleveland, Ohio, and Wellsville, N. Y. were very successful, and he is particularly fitted for his new position in the promotional work among the churches.

Mr. Flewelling will preside over the afternoon period of the rally Tuesday, and conduct a conference on best methods for local congregations to handle their regular budgets for missions and benevolences. As a former pastor, who actually employed the methods explained, his suggestions and outlines will rest upon a solid foundation of experience.

Dr. Peters arrived in Dixon this morning, coming from services yesterday at Rock Falls and Sterling, and will speak at the Pine Creek Church, north of town this evening. Resulting from his visit to Rock Falls, arrangements were made for him to return on Easter Sunday, and lead the congregation there in eliminating their indebtedness, a line of work in which Dr. Peters has made himself of eminent value during his eight years work as Secretary of Illinois Missions. Mr. Flewelling and Evangelist Sword of Lanark will arrive tomorrow morning, the latter speaking at 11 o'clock on the subject, "The Fields Are White."

Former Dixon Man Now Building Pipe Organs

C. E. Floto, former Dixon boy and nowa resident of Long Beach, Calif., is becoming prominent in the building of pipe organs on the Pacific coast. He has completed and installed his first organ in the Methodist church at La Mesa, Calif., where his brother Dr. A. E. Floto is located. The two young men are the sons of Mrs. Charles Floto, former Dixonite who now lives with her son, Dr. A. E. Floto at La Mesa.

The instrument, which is being built by the former Dixon young man, is a two manual, electrically equipped instrument, modern in every appointment and is especially adapted to churches. After building and installing the organ in the La Mesa Methodist church in December, Mr. Floto decided to continue building organs and is meeting with great success.

Rockford Man Shot in Leg: Suspect New Plot

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 8—(AP)—Sam McDowell, 26, is recovering from a bullet wound in his left eg, which, he told the authorities, was inflicted Sunday at midnight by two unidentified men who pretended to be taking him to the Chappell Brothers horse meat packing plant, whre he was formerly a guard.

McDowell said he was awakened by a telephone call purporting to come from a local detective agency and that the men called for him in an auto. Near Back Hawk Park, according to his story, he jumped from the car and one of the men shot him. He fired four shots in return.

The sheriff's office is investigating McDowell's story with the theory that it may reveal a new conspiracy directed against the packing company. McDowell is said to have participated in the shooting and capture of Frank Litts, under indictment for attempting to dynamite the plant. Litts is to be tried soon.

Wedding Anniversary Happily Observed

Mr. and Mrs. August Burhenn, of 524 Ottawa avenue, were delightfully surprised on Saturday evening by a company of friends and relatives. They expected a visit from their son, Theodore and family of Nachusa, but did not expect the merry crowd of thirty-five guests who followed Theodore Burhenn and his family as he opened the door and walked into the home of his parents. The surprise was in honor of the wedding anniversay of Mr. and Mrs. Burhenn, Sr., and both of them were so surprised that they could not talk for a few minutes. They soon recovered and made their guests welcome. The evening was spent in music, and games, a number of the guests enjoying 500. At midnight delicious refreshments were served, including sandwiches, pickles, cake, coffee and ice cream. Cigars were passed later to the gentlemen. Later the merry company departed, leaving as a token of their esteem a beautiful floor lamp, with best wishes for happiness and health for Mr. and Mrs. Burhenn.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Adam Eisenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Burhenn and son, Wilbur, Miss Ila Ewald, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Krug, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schafer, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Eisenberg and daughter, Vadna, of Ashton; Mr. and Mrs. John Mall, Mr. and Mrs. Emery Erbes, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Petrie and son Raymond and daughter, Leona, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Herwig and son Junior, Franklin Grove; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Burhenn, daughter, Bernice, and Raymond Gagstetter of Nachusa; Mrs. Alvin Schick and son, Alvin, of Minnesota.

ALL WOMEN SHOULD FIGHT AGANIST IT—

Washington, Feb. 8.—(AP)—An appeal to the women of America to aid in the fight against use of the steel trap in capturing fur bearing animals was made public here last night over the signature of Gertrude Atherton, the writer, Minnie Maddern Fiske, the actress; Mrs. Cornelia B. Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania; Mrs. J. B. Henderson, an outstanding social leader in Washington and Mrs. Ada Louise Fletcher, wife of the senator from Florida.

The statement endorsed the work of the recently organized Anti-Steel Trap League, whose object is to secure prohibitory legislation in every state.

"A shameful stigma has been put upon the American woman," it said. "Women of America, keep your furs if you will, but help us, in the name of justice and compassion to do away with that foul instrument of torture, the steel trap, so that, at very least, you may have the blessed relief of knowing that the furs you wear are not the direct result of needless agony.

"Will you not help us to present our righteous case adequately before the legislative bodies of our land?"

Tea on Saturday Enjoyable Event

A charming culmination, in a series of most enjoyable parties, was the tea given Saturday afternoon at the Dement home on Peoria avenue, by Mrs. Dement and her daughters, Mrs. Morgan Davies, Mrs. Gordon Utley, and Mrs. Wilson Dysart.

The tea, or most delicious supper, was served at a large table in the dining room and at smaller tables in the rooms adjoining. Most attractive and springlike were the decorations, a rich yellow in the dining room where calendulas and tulips, were the flowers artistically arranged. In the other room pink and white freesia, purple heather, and pink and white tulips, were the lovely flowers employed.

There was much merriment over the "cake" guessing contest which entertained the guests, Mrs. F. K. Tribou and Mrs. C. G. Smith winning the prizes, a toothsome fruit cake and a box of assorted cakes. The contest was a test of memory as to the various kinds of cake and it proved unusually entertaining and original.

CASABIANCA—

The boy stood on the burning deck,
Whence all but he had fled!
The flames that lit the battle's wreck
Shone round him o'er the dead.

Yet beautiful and bright he stood,
As born to rule the storm—
A creature of heroic blood,
A proud though child-like form.

The flames rolled on—he would not go
Without his father's word;
That father faint in death below,
His voice no longer heard.

He called aloud: "Say, father, say
If yet my task is done!"
He knew not that the chieftain lay
Unconscious of his son.

"Speak, father!" once again he cried,
"If I may yet be gone!"
And but the booming shots replied,
And fast the flames rolled on.

Upon his brow he felt their breath,
And in his waving hair,
And looked from that lone post of death
In still yet brave despair,

And shouted but once more aloud,
"My father! Must I stay"
While o'er him fast, through sail and shroud,
The wreathing fires made way.

They wrapt the ship in splendor wild,
They caught the flag on high,
And streamed above the gallant child
Like banners in the sky.

There came a burst of thunder-sound,
The boy—oh! where was he?
Ask the winds that far around
With fragments strewed the sea!

With mast, and helm, and pennon fair,
That well had borne their part;
But the noblest thing which perished there
Was that young faithful heart!

—Mrs. Hemans.

Pleasant Meeting of W. F. M. S. Thursday

A very pleasant meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held at the Methodist church Thursday afternoon, Feb. 4, with forty-six members and guests present. The meeting opened by singing the official hymn, "The King's Highway."

Mrs. W. D. Hartzell conducted the Devotions. Secretary and treasurer's reports were given, communications read, and several items of business voted upon, after which Rev. Carlson very forcibly gave the chapter in the Study Book, "Prayer and Missions." Mrs. Randall conducted the mystery box which was interesting and instructive. Mrs. Mrs. Deutsch at the piano, Rev. Carlson favovered with a vocal solo, "The Old Rugged Cross." The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Rowe. A social hour was then enjoyed as refreshments were served.

Menus for the Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—

Stewed dried apricots, cereal, thin cream, crisp whole wheat toast, codfish and potato puff, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—

Bacon and lettuce sandwiches, steamed fig pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—

Scalloped mutton, buttered brussels sprouts, jellied fruit salad, whole wheat bead, milk, coffee.

The scalloped mutton is a combination dish furnishing both protein and carbohydrates.

No dessert is planned for the dinner menu, the fruit salad making a sweet unnecessary.

This steamed fig pudding is a little unusual and the sauce is so simple that it's worth remembering.

One-third cup butter, two-thirds cup sugar, 2 eggs, ½ cup milk, 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cu pchopped figs, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Cream butter and beat in sugar. Stir in two tablespoons flour. Add yolks of eggs well beaten. Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Stir in figs and fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into individual well-buttered molds and steam 45 minutes. Unmold and serve warm with the following sauce.

Orange Sauce.

Two eggs, 1 cup sauger, 2 teaspoons grated orange rind, 4 tablespoons orange juice.

Beat eggs until light with a dover beater. Beat in sugar and granted rind. Beat in orange juice and serve. The fruit juice will thin the sauce slightly.

Missionary Circle Had Guest Day

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Maurice Ortgiesen entertained the Missionary Circle of the Christian church at their Guest Day meeting.

The rooms were artistically decorated in lavender and white, the colors of the society.

The program was in charge of Mrs. Russel Hoyle and opened with a hymn after which she read Psalm 8: 3-9 on the Stewardship of Life.

Little Miss Avis Ortgiesen then sang a solo which was much enjoyed.

"Under the Southern Cross," was the topics for the evening and short articles were were by various members, pertaining to South America of yesterday and today.

These were followed by the book review which was given by Mrs. Scott Byers.

Miss Hazel Rust gave a delightful piano solo, the Military Waltz by Logan and Mr. Ortgiesen sang two solos, "Lead Thou Me On," and "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep," playing his own accompaniments.

After the benediction a social hour was enjoyed and tempting refreshments were served by the hostess.

"THE BETTER TO HEAR WITH, MY CHILD"—

Vienna, Feb. 8.—(AP)—The noise and clamor of modern city life are producing a race of elephant-eared men and women, says Dr. Fritz Pfuffer, a Vienna ear specialist. He predicts that in the distant future, humans will have auditory extremities the size of a Daschshund's.

Women, says Dr. Pfuffer, will be hardest hit. The grand children of women who now wear their hair over their ears will have to continue the fad because their ears will be so unsightly that they must be covered up.

Dr. Pfuffer bases his prediction on measurements of patients' ears during the last 30 years.

C. C. CIRCLE TO MEET FRIDAY—

The C. C. Circle will be entertained on Friday afternoon, Feb. 12, at the home of Mrs. J. H. Dunavan, 318 Lincoln Way, with Mrs. C. B. Rhodes and Miss Julia Johnson as assisting hostesses.

Friday will be guest day and a large attendance is hoped for.

Each member bringing guests is requested to notify one of the three hostesses.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—

Air Daily.

Beds should be aired at least half an hour daily with all windows open.

Wrapped Ice.

Ice that is wrapped in newspaper will not keep the refrigerator cold. It has to melt in order to cool the box.

Sweet Butter.

Be especially careful to keep sweet butter in a covered container, for it absorbs odors and flavors from other foods in the ice box more rapidly than salted butter.

Frying Pans

Wipe grease off frying pans before washing, using tissue paper or paper towels kept in the kitchen for that purpose.

Burnt Utensils.

The marks of burn may be removed easily if the utensils is filled with cold water containing some soda, and is then set over the fire till the water boils.

BY CYNTHIA GREY—

Married friend Alice and I went on a Saturday afternoon "bat" a week or so ago, winding up with supper at Alice's house because husband Tom was away on a business trip and the setting was perfect for a gossipfest.

Somehow, Alice was not as all aglow and pepped-up as a lady should be after an afternoon bat with chicken salad lunch, symphony concert, and hot fudge sundae.

The reason came forth as Alice poured my second cup of orange pekoe:

"How in the world do they do it?" she almost demanded. "It isn't fair! It isn't right! They work no harder than we wives, and not nearly as hard!"

I waited, and Alice poured forth her unvialed wrath which had been accumulating all afternoon.

It seems that it centered about the "poor working girl" whom Alice had seen out in all her "Saturday afternoon off glory" by the hundreds that afternoon.

I, perhaps tactlessly, had pointed out to Alice one snappy creature after another. It seemed to me that never had I seen such a display of chic damozels.

"No wonder there are divorces!" went on Alice, still seething with her theme of envy and injustice. "Look at my wardrobe!" and Alice dragged me from my third cup of tea to see the worst.

Not Dazzling.

It wasn't so dazzing, I must admit! I knew that Alice had worn that brown velour coat with the fow collar, a bit moth-chewed now, at least three and maybe four seasons. The little brown satin hat had been bought "because you can wear satin the year around." Alice now explained when she bought it, and she had worn it at least two summers and two winters.

"It isn't fair! Something's all wrong somewhere!" Alice boiled on. "Those girls we saw this afternoon make from $20 to $40 a week, or around $150 a month. They get to work at 9, pound a typewriter until 5, with two hours out for lunch—which somebody else cooked and they don't know what they're going to eat—go home at 5, and their day is over. They're ready for a whole evening of play!

"Most of them live at home and pay no board. That means $150 a month just to spend on themselves! Cynthia, I haven't had $50 this year which I spent on myself! My only pin money is what I can squeeze from the $10 a week house money Tom gives me!"

Alice isn't the only wife and mother who resents those fur coats and cut-steel buckles on the frail form of "the poor working girl." I wonder if my little sermon to Alice may not quell their turbulent thought a bit!

Seeking a Home.

First of all, isn't it true that the very goal of these fur-coated, marcelled, chiffon-hosed girlies is the very thing that Alice herself has?

They want a home, a husband. Their clothes are purely amatory bait, either consciously or unconsciously.

There are only two classes of girls working in the business and professional world. Girls and women who have chosen work as only temporary and a prelude to marriage, and girls who have accepted or chosen it as their permanent groove and objective, either of necessity, because they know marriage is rather improbable for them, or of choice because they prefer the working world.

You can plainly tell the two types from their dress. The fur-coated maidens who spend every cent on their "duds" are frankly in the marriage market. The "neatly dressed" girl has money in the bank, an insurance policy, possibly is making payments on a lot, and may own a coupe. She is saving for a trip to Europe and plans her own home with a fireplace and a built-in ironing board.

Same Goal.

In other words, the working girl who more or less eschews matrimonial plans is working for the self-same goal that the married woman has—a home, a certain degree of economic security.

And the other girl, the beautiful one who looks like a fashion plate, is after the very same thing, whether she consciously knows it or not. In time the marcel and the high heels will mean a Mrs. before her name. She will wear her winter coats three years because they are buying their home. She will own only two pairs of shoes because the bay needs a new buggy.

No energy is so wasted as envy of the single girl who can flaunt beautiful duds. The law of compensation is read more clearly here than any place I know.

PSYCHO-ANALYSIS BACK OF REUNION OF BANKER, WIFE

Stillmans to Take Up Science for Sake of Children

New York, Feb. 8—(AP)—Psychoanalysis, in which Mrs. James A. Stillman was originally interested by young Fowler McCormick is now being studied abroad the Oympic by her husband during their trial reconciliation.

McCormick, beloved by Mrs. Stillman as a son, is the son of Harold F. McCormick of Chicago and a grandson of J. D. Rockefeller.

When Mrs. Stillman was broken in spirit because of her divorce proceedings brought by her husband, McCormick, suggested she study psycho-analysis.

Mrs. Stillman and McCormick, who is 17 years her junior, have long been friends, but talk of marriage between them was always "nonsense," she hos insisted. She has loved him, she said once, just as she loves her sons.

"Fowler and I love and understand each other," she said recently, "but we are not lovers. Do you think I could have been able to leave him if we had been lovers"

Brought About Trial

McCormick, Mrs. Anne Stillman Davison and her brother, James (Bud) played a large part in preliminary discussions that resulted in the trial reconciliation.

Mrs. Davison, abroad, won her father and mother back to affectionate interest in each others welfare. Bud and McCormick deferred the reconciliation six week in the belief that Mrs. Stillman was giving everything and getting nothing in return.

Only when their doubts were reversed at a family conference did the banker's wife decide on the European trip abroad.

The Stillmans will visit their daughter Anne in Paris and later will see Dr. Baynes who is on a hunting trip abroad.

To Consult Author

When the Stillmans left Saturday, Mrs. Stillman carried two well-thumbed books—Jung's "Psychological Types," and "Psycho-analysis and the Psychoses," by R. F. Baynes, whom Mr. Stillman will consult in England.

To prepare the way, Mrs. Stillman, the New York American is advised, is instructing her husband in the rudiments of the new science of the mind.

Strength she received from treatments Dr. Baynes made it possible for her to fight her way through the divorce case to victory, she has said, and she believes it can help her husband enough to make it possible for them to start to live together again for the sake of the children.

Sticky Snow Prevented New Marks at Ski Meet

Canton, S. Dak. Feb. 8—(AP)—Thirteen thousand persons yesterday saws Larns Haugen of St. Paul win class A honors at the annual Sioux Valley Ski Tournament here. He scored 18.59 points.

Barney Riley of Chicago, known as the "skiing Irishman" had the longest standing jump, 151 feet. Class B. honors went to H. Walstad of Minneapolis with 18.81 points. Jorgen Johanson of Rockford, Ill., was second Hans Strand, also of Rockford, third.

Record breaking skiing was impossible because of the sticky snow caused by the warm weather.

CONDITIONS IN U. S. ARMY AIR ARM ORDERED PROBED

Attitude of Officers Toward Policies of Dept. Inquired

Washington, Feb. 8—(AP)—Investigation of conditions in the army air service has been ordered by Secretary Davis of the War department.

The secretary wants to know whether air service officers still are opposing the air policies of President Coolidge, and are employing disloyal methods in carrying forward the agitation for a separate air corps.

To establish the facts, two separate inquiries have been ordered by the secretary. One phase has been placed in the hands of Major General Helmick, inspector general of the army. Another has been entrusted to Major General Patrick, chief of the air service.

Whether disciplinary action will be taken by the secretary depends on the nature and completeness of the information collected. It is conceded to be within the realm of possibilities that a general shake up of air service personnel, including court martial proceedings similar to those which preceded the exit of Col. William Mitchell from the army, will follow.

Study Anonymous Papers.

While Mr. Davis and other department officials decline to disclose the evidence which led to the decision for a sweeping investigation, it is known that the war secretary has in his possession copies of anonymous documents believed by some departmental authorities to have been mimeographed and distributed through air service headquarters. These called upon recipients, believed to be air service officers on duty with national guard and reserve organizations throughout the country, to "get busy" in their support of the air corps bill.

Reported activities of air officers in furnishing congressmen with prepared statements intended for distribution through their offices at the capitol and supporting other legislative proposals for alteration of the president's air policy also will be carefully inquired into by the investigators.

SENATE LEADERS PRESS FOR VOTE ON TAX BILL SOON

Night Sessions to be Held to Enable All to Have Say

Washington, Feb. 8— (AP)— The senate dug in today in continuance of its fight over tax reduction with leaders of both parties determined to bring the bill to a final vote before the end of the week.

Opponents of certain provisions of the measure were faced with the declaration of Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, in charge of the bill, that he would demand night sessions starting immediately. Under that program, the senate would sit in continuous session from 11 a. m. until 10 u. m., daily until the measure is passed.

More than a week of debate on the bill has resulted in a decision on only one of the three main controversial provisions—reduction of the sur tax rates—and for the fourth consecutive session, the senate today sought to reach a vote on the provision repealing the law allowing publication of the amounts of tax payments.

Norris Leads Fight.

Senator Norris, republican, Neb., who has led the fight against other sections of the bill, was ready today to renew his effort to amend it to allow public inspection of all income tax returns.

The investigation of the Internal Revenue Bureau which was conducted by a special senate committee also waited further airing today.

Senator Couzens, republican of Michigan, chairman of the committee, in presenting the report, signed by Senators King of Utah and Jones of New Mexico, democrats, asked for public inspection of returns.

Senator Ernst, republican, Kentucky, has presented a minority report signed also by Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, opposing the conclusions reached by the majority and declaring against publicity.

Following the publicity debate the senate must act on the proposal of the finance committee to repeal the inheritance tax.

SCIENCE PROTECTS FAITH.

Science is the great destroyer of illusions.

But once in a great while science abandons this role and, instead, stands as the great protector of illusions. And when this happens we should give thanks.

For man lives by illusions. The naked facts of the universe or such of them as we are able to grasp] are too big and severe to be lived with comfortably by most of us. So we take refuge in our illusions, drawing them about us to make the world seem a little smaller, more friendly and less appalling.

First we believed that our earth was the center of all created things, with a sky that fitted down around the rims like an upturned bowl, and a sun about the size of a cartwheel that was hauled across the firmament daily by thoughtful divinities.

Science exploded that faith and left us swinging alone in a cold, wark immensity of empty space. It tore down other beliefs, one by one, and made very unhappy skeptics out of a great many good people.

But now the pendulum swings the other way.

Our most cherished belief has always been the pathetic, groping faith that we, individually, count for something in a world outside our own; that we are not left here on an isolated planet to live forgotten lives and then die forever, but that somehow, somewhere we will live again.

This faith has been weakened, of late. To many of us it has seemed that science has knocked too many props out from under us. It has been hard to cling to the old certainties in the face of these men with their microscopes, their test tubes and their telescopes.

Here, however, is where science step in as a protector rather than a destroyer.

For with wider knowledge we can not deny anything—even immortality—surely.

The more science discovers about this world of ours, the more does the scientist realize that no hard-and-fast conclusion about it can ever be drawn. The atheist who cries "there is no God and there is no soul" is taking a lot more for granted than any other man in the world.

The scientist learns that all matter, from the grain of sand to the mountain of granite and the spring breeze, is composed of the same stuff—of infinitely small electrons which, on examination, appear to be nothing but charges of electricity!

He learns that his strongest telescope cannot reach the boundaries of space; not though it can find stars whose light rays, traveling at 180,000 miles a second, have been five million years in reaching us.

He learns that creation is a continuous process, going on now in the space about us as vigorously and eternally as it did when the stars were young.

And in the face of this can one deny, utterly, the soul?

No. Such knowledge brings humility. But it also brings the certitude that nothing that ever was made was made in vain; that there is a pain so far beyond our power of conception that denial is foolish; that the power that hurls the meteor across the skies and sets a million stars spinning in the dark is also capable of hearing a little child's laugh, and of stopping to pay heed to the strivings and aspirations of the sons of men.

THE PHILIPPINES.

Rubber can be grown in the Philippines. American firms, tired of paying Britain's extortionate prices, are preparing to cultivate enormous plantations there.

All persons who wish to bet that the Filipinos will soon get their independence—repeatedly promised by our government, you know—will kindly fall in line on the right.

What? No one? Well, well, well.

James E. Risden, chief of the Iowa state bureau of investigation, who has spent most of his life tracing and capturing criminals, believes that executions of criminals should be public affairs, as it would spread the fear of the law among all spectators. That would be all right, if there were executions, not simply an occasional one, as now. Let executions equal murders in number, then murders will be fewer.

Now, girls, the story is that the Prince of Wales is about to marry Princess Astrid, 20-year-old niece of the Swedish king and grandniece of the late Queen Alexandra. So if you have any monkey wrenches for the machinery you'll have to hurry.

And now, if the league of nations invites both conspicuous outsiders, Russia and the United States, to an arament conference at Geneva, it is going to be just a bit embarrassing to both.

French failure to settle with the United States is causing depreciation of the French franc. France may lose as much by failure to pay as she would part with when paying.

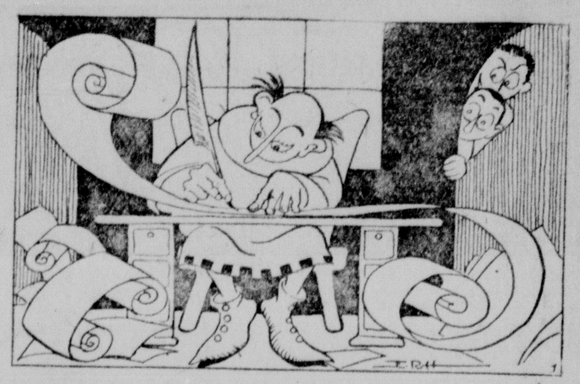

What, asks a realist, is the satisfaction of achievement compared with the satisfaction of watching other people work?

Wonder how soon they'll go back again to normalcy in France? France is always normal when changing governments.

What is so rare as a ton in January?

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS
by Clive Roberts Barton

NO. 1—THE LAND OF THE BLUE CHERRY

"He just sits with a pen in his hand and writes and writes and writes all the time.

The Fairy Queen telephoned for the Twins to go to her palace at once as she had a very important errand for them to do.

So they lost no time in hunting up her secret dwelling place, which was south of the Dingle Dell, north of the Windy Wold, west of the Glimmering Glade and east of the Setting Sun.

"How do you do, my dears!" said the Fairy Queen when they arrived. "I'm very happy to see you."

"We're pretty well, thank you," said Nick. "Except that I've got a loose tooth and can't eat apples."

"And I have a scratch on my finger," said Nancy. "Caesar and I were playing and he scratched me."

"Just like a cat!" said the Fairy Queen. "They have queer notions of fun. But there! Were losing time and poor Twinkle Pen is suffering."

"Twinkle Pen!" cried the Twins together.

"Yes," nodded her Royal Highness. "Poor old Twinkle Pen. He is my chief clerk and secretary, you know, who attends to all my business and writes my notes for me. The poor dear fairyman went to take a drink of water last night, and in the dark he picked up his inkwell by mistake and drank all the ink."

"That was terrible!" said Nancy. "Did he die?"

"No," said the Fairy Queen. "Fairies dont die. But he turned black all over at once, then green, then purple, then blue. He's blue now, and his hair is orange. Beside that he is in a most peculiar condition. He can't stop writing. He just sits with a pen in his hand and writes and writes and writes all the time. He's filled up all the paper in the palace and he's beginning on the walls. The ink flows right out through the ends of his fingers. It's terrible indeed."

"Can't he stop?" asked Nick.

"It seems not," said the Fairy Queen. "He's written the A. B. C.'s in twenty languages, the dictionary twice, and added up all the numbers in the telephone book. I'm ever so afraid that he'll begin on 'Forty-nine Blue Bottles a Hanging on the Wall.' If he does all is lost, for that poem has no end."

"Can we help?" asked Nick.

"Yes, indeed," said the Fairy Queen quickly. "That is why I sent for you. Doctor Pulsen Pills and Doctor Sniffles, the two fairy doctors for whom I sent at once, say that there is a cure for ink drinking. It is a blue cherry."

At that minute Doctor Sniffles himself walked into the room. And upon hearing the Fairy Queen's last words, he remarked. "Yes, a blue cherry is the only cure for our poor friend, as it was blue ink he drank. If he had drunk red ink, any cherry would do to cure him. But unfortunately it was blue ink. Even black ink would have been less difficult to cure, for there are black cherries in plenty. Or green ink would have been—poof!—nothing at all!"

"Of course it had to be blue!" said the Fairy Queen despairingly. "And where are we to find a blue cherry?"

"Aha!" cried a voice at the door. "That was what I was trying to think of—the very word. Blue! Blue! Blue! Forty-nine blue bottles a hanging on the wall! Tha, la, la, la, la, la, I'll have to write that now. I still have all the sheets and table cloths and towels and napkins to write on."

And in walked poor Twinkle Pen, looking like a large blue and orange mosquito.

"Me, oh, my!" sighed the Fairy Queen. "The worst has happened. We shall have to find the blue cherry as soon as we can now."

The FANGLE

The whole horrible catastrophe was over before any of those about could breathe. Where just before had been a lovely woman, dressed in gorgeous clothes, her throat encircled with a million dollars worth of pearls, talking and laughing with a man in the prime and vigor of his life, there was only a little heap of seething fiery, flaming steel.

The reporter was a member of the marines during the late war but not even the terrible sights of the battlefield and the hospitals struck such horror to his soul as did this spectacle. Only one thing made one feel that possibly the accident was not quite as bad as it seemed.

An old steel man who was standing near has given it as his opinion that neither Miss Perier nor Mr Prescott knew what had struck them as they were unconscious before the flaming mass really enveloped them.

At this point in the description to the reporter, the man, who had seen many accidents in the mill, collapsed and was able to say no more. Both Mr. Condon, the assistant manager of the works, and Miss Sally Atherton, Mrs. Prescott's secretary, were seriously burned as they started toward the hapless victims, but were held back by saner hands.

About five others were seriously burned by splashing, red hot steel while many had their clothing almost burned off from the heat but miraculously suffered only skin wounds.

It was a moment before the spectators further back went to the rescue of these others as the horror of seeing the two principle victims disappear in the flaming torrent seemed to stop every heart beat. But, in a few seconds—that a spectator says seemed hours—someone called the police, the fire department, nurses and doctors attached to the plant and soon the adjacent offices as well as the hospital in connection with the mill, were filled with weeping, crazy, nerve-torn men and women.

Coming right after the gaiety and joyousness of the Orthopedic Hospital Bazaar, this catastrophe has turned all Pittsburgh into mourning.

It was Mr. Karl Whitney's sad duty to break the news to Mrs. Prescott and her mother, Mrs. Hamilton, both of whom are prostrated with horror and grief. In fact, fears are expressed for Mrs. Prescott's sanity.

A STORY OF A GIRL of TODAY

WHY GIRLS WALK HOME

As I wearily put my latch-key in the lock, I noticed with consternation that there was a light in mother's room. I knew I was too tired and wet and uncomfortable to go into details of my evening with dad and mother—especially dad.

I opened the door softly and sat down on the stairs and removed my wet and sodden shoes.

Sounds of conversation came from the room above where my parents slept. I could not distinguish the words but both voices were raised and disagreeably raucous. They were quarreling about something, as usual.

I knew that I would be in for another hour of explanations and excuses and would not be able to rest my weary body or ease my troubled mind unless I could pass that door, which was slightly ajar, without my parents hearing me. I didn't want to talk to my mother and father about this evening's episode, at least until morning. I was not just sure what I was going to do about it myself.

As I came nearer the room I unconsciously slowed my pace, for I was determined to pass that door without their knowing it.

I thought exultantly that my father's voice was raised to such a high pitch of anger that it would be impossible for him to hear me, but is also made is impossible for me not to hear what he was saying.

"I tell you, Susan, I will not have that girl staying out to this time of night. It is simply scandalous! It must be nearly morning." As if to confirm his statement, the clock on the landing struck four.

I stood still and held my breath while dad, after counting the tell-tale tones, returned to the attack.

"You need not tell me Susan, that a girl can stay out until four o'clock in the morning and still retain any semblance of reputation or decency."

"Jason Dean, do you know you are talking about your daughter, Julia?" asked my mother angrily.

"I am perfectly well aware of it, madam, but I am not such a besotted fool as to think my daughter is any different from any other man's girl, although you may think so. I heard you making very scurrilous remarks about the little Winston girl the other day because she was hurt in a collision while joyriding with Lyman Andrews. Is it any more respectable for your daughter to be 'joyriding' as you called it, than Winston's?"

"But Jason," remonstrated my mother, "she is out with Charles Becker and you know I have been expecting the children to announce their engagement ever since he came home from college. Surely you cannot think any young man would treat the girl he is going to marry otherwise than with respect!"

"Respect! Hell!" was my father's retort. "I know that when I was young no respectable girl would be out until four o'clock in the morning with a man alone unless she wanted to be considered fast. You ought to get hold of young Becker and make him tell you what his intentions are. It is my opinion that they are not of marriage."

They were so engrossed in their quarrel that I passed the door in safety and softly shut myself in my own room.

Then I sat down on the floor and silently laughed, although I wanted to scream.

I wondered what answer Chuck Becker would make mother when she asked his intentions toward me.

New York—Regarding the term "waiters" as of menial significance, which does great injustice, the United Restaurant Owners Association is to conduct a prize contest for a new name.

New York— Many members think that the bob has reached the end of its career and others are sure it is permanent, so the American Master Hair Dressers Association is going to offer prizes for the best transformation to cover up a bob, in convention next month.

New York—It is unsafe to tear up good $20 bills. John Juke strewed bits of $2000 around and was arrested. Laughing, he would not explain except to say that he had more in the bank which also would be torn up.

Member of Old Russian Family Found Murdered

Moscow, Feb. 6—(AP)—Princess Obolensky, 23 years old, member of one of the oldest families in Russia, was found murdered today in the snow outside a bath house in one of Moscow's principal streets. Police say the murderer is the janitor of an adjacent house and that he already has confessed his guilt.

Behind the crime is a story of one of the most pathetic tragedies of Russia's great social upheaval, going back to the revolution of 1917 before which the girl's family was one of the proudest of the Czarist regime.

When the Bolsheviks seized power it is said that the young princess' governess, in whose care she had been placed, deserted her and escaped abroad. Helpless, destitute and alone, the princess Obolesky several of whose relatives have found refuge in America, took shelter in one of Moscow's numerous night asylums for beggars.

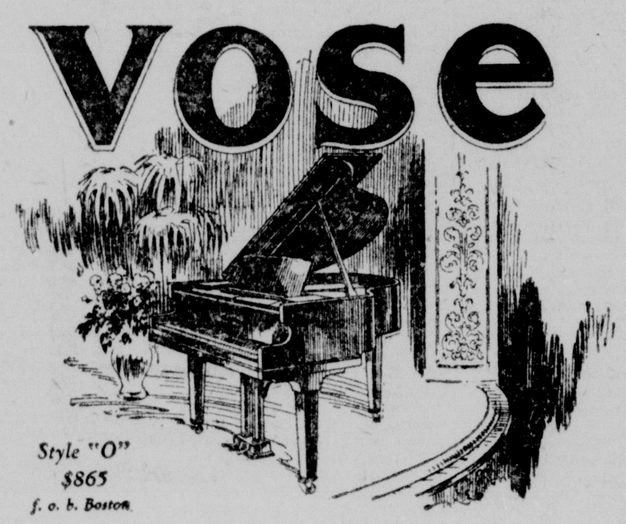

Later, she drifted into a life of the streets, seeking support from anyone who would give her food and lodging.

NEWS FROM DIXON YMCA

First Meeting of Men's Sunday Club Was Great Success

Dr. W. W. Peters, President of the Mount Morris College, gave an inspirational address Sunday afternoon at the Men's Fireside Meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Dr. Peters is the new president of the college, going there from Indiana. He has had considerable experience in Y. M. C. A. work and is conversant with it's history. He traced the movement from its inception in London, England, in 1844 and outlined the purpose of the Association at that time and compared it with its purpose of the present day. Dr. Peters was well received and received a hearty invitation to return at an early day.

For the first meeting of this Sunday afternoon discussion group, it was not expected that many would be present, but the committee was surprised and encouraged when over double the number expected came. Following the address, a discussion followed as to meetings for the future and it was decided to have a series of addresses on present day topics, with a religious discussion following. An opportunity will b given any young man to present any question he wishes for discussion ot these meetings. The idea of these Sunday afternoon meetings is xpressley for the young men of the city and indications yesterday pointed to a very successful organization.

Pioneer Clubs to Meet Tomorrow Night at "Y"

The Dixon Sunday School Pioneer Clubs with their leaders will meet tomorrow evening at th "Y" for their usual scramble supper. Last week the clubs were organized and this week the constitution and opening ritual will be adopted by each club. Beside memorizing the "Aims of a Pioneer," he must also memorize the "Purpose of a Pioneer," which is, "To follow the trail blazed by the Great Pioneer, in life of service and of growth in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man."

The Sunday school boys of the city are enthusiastic over the Pioneer movement, and it is expected after Tuesday's meeting the orgonization part will be completed, so that next week the first lessons for discussion will be started. Next week first aid will be taken up, more particularly dealing with triangular bandages and how to use them.

Another Busy Week in Prospect for Soc. Dept.

Last week was a very busy one for the local Y. M. C. A. and practically every day of the week saw either one or two banquets or suppers served in the building. Monday, Girls' Hi-Y Supper.

Tuesday, Pioneer Boys' Supper.

Wednesday, Dr. Long—Laymans' noon luncheon. Reyonld's Wire Employee's supper.

Thursday, Hi-Y Club noon luncheon. Toastmaster's Club supper.

The Tomorrow of Gasoline

What does the future hold in store for gasoline in its relation to man?

Will there be new uses for it? Will there be enough to go around?

What will the price be? It is interesting to contemplate its probabilities in our rapidly changing world.

Fifty years ago, oil wells were about 70 feet deep. The cost to "bring in" oil was a few hundred dollars. Today, wells are from 3,000 to 6,000 feet deep and it costs $50,000 or more to "bring in" oil.

What will it cost in 1930?

Twenty-two per cent of all the oil wells drilled in 1920 were dry—twenty-five per cent of all the oil wells drilled in 1925 were dry.

What will be the percentage in 1930?

In the past twelve and a half years, dry wells cost approximately $700,000,000 and in the same period producing wells which failed to return enough oil to pay their cost sustained an aggregate loss of another $500,000,000.

Wherein do these losses affect the price of gasoline, you ask?

They have an intimate bearing, because they must be absorbed by the industry and be spread over the productive wells.

But they supply only part of the answer to the fluctuating price of gasoline.

There are scores of other hazards and factors over which no man or group of men have any control which must be considered.

A few years ago the nation was confronted with what appeared to be an unavoidable shortage of gasoline.

Then the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) by reason of commercially successful cracking processes, which it had developed, saved the situation.

This Company was able to double the yield of gasoline from a barrel of crude.

Without Standard Oil Company (Indiana) cracking processes it is conservative to state that you would be paying a corresponding double price for gasoline today.

That was constructive service of inestimable value.

But what about tomorrow? Who knows?

For the week ending January 16, 1926, the daily average production of crude oil in the United States was 76,050 barrels less than it was during the same period of 1925.

For the week ending January 23, 1926, the daily average production of crude oil in the United States was 19,250 barrels less than for the week preceding.

If these decreases continue, the age-old law of supply and demand can be expected to exert itself and the price of crude oil will advance. If history repeats itself, the price of gasoline and other petroleum products can be expected to advance, unless other factors intervene.

It is with these problems that the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) must grapple, that you may have an unfailing supply of gasoline, when and where you want it, at the most reasonable price at which it is possible to supply it.

As long as the world goes on, economic conditions will change and the price of gasoline probably will fluctuate, but the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) with its research and business foresight has done much to stabilize and keep the price down.

Whether the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) will be as successful in inventing ways and means to combat the caprices of nature in the future is to be seen.

But when economic laws thrust themselves into the situation and cause fluctuations in gasoline prices, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) asks the people of the Middle West to consider the myriad factors having a bearing and known only to those in daily intimate touch with the oil industry.

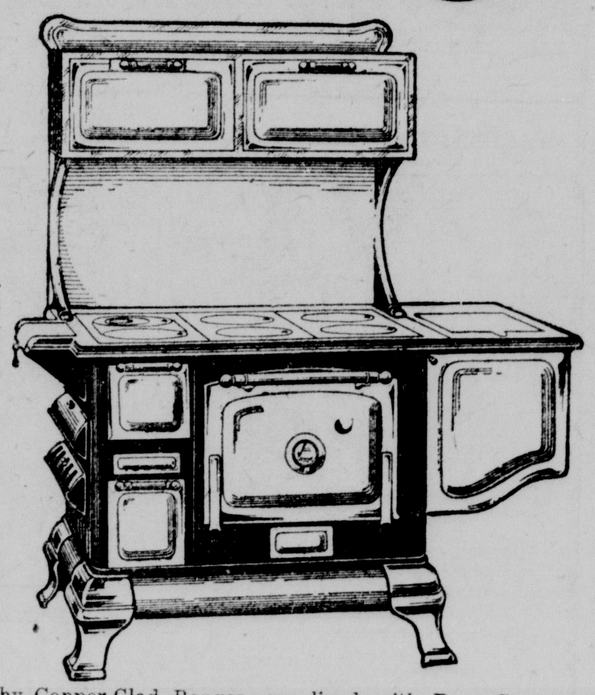

It asks them to appreciate that this Company is constantly exerting all its energies to supply gasoline at a price which will reflect only the cost of crude oil, manufacturing and distribution, plus a small and reasonable profit.

Standard Oil Company (Indiana) served you yesterday, is serving you today—it will do so tomorrow.

SYNOPSIS

Prince Michael Yervedoff, wealthy Russian in Paris, becomes interested in Colette, pretty street reveller. Michael's younger brother, Paul, whom he has always shielded from fast life, arrives for a visit. To get him away from the loose merry-making, Michael sends him up to bed. But Dolores, one of Michael's cast-offs, sees in Paul a tool for revenge and vamps him. Michael, finding them, is angry and disturbed.

CHAPTER II—Continued

"It is past three, Paul, and as we have a busy day ahead I would suggest that you get some sleep. I am sure that Mademoiselle will excuse you."

Paul glanced at his brother questioningly. There was something mysterious in this. But obedience to Michael was a habit too deeply implanted to be thwarted on first thought. He turned to Dolores.

"Goodnight, Mademoiselle, and remember, I shall count the hours until our next dance."

Hardly had Paul left the room when Michael whirled to Dolores, his face livid with anger.

"I thought you had gone!"

Dolores was all ice and snow and remote solitudes.

"I was about to leave, Monsieur, when your brother returned here and courteously begged me to stay a while longer. He pleaded in the same convincing manner that you used to employ, and—well, you see!"

What a different Dolores was speaking now! Her voice rang vibrantly with cold defiance and challenge.

"He found my presence a little more enjoyable than you seem to," she added with a taunting gesture.

"I presume he did," said Michael, further upset and enraged as he caught sight of the emptied wine glasses.

"Mon Dieu! You know that I never let Paul touch a drop of wine in my house, or whenever I have been with him! It is you whom I shall remember as the person who first plied him with champagne. It is you——"

The Yervedoff emerald was there before her!

Dolores interrupted imperiously, haughtily: "You flatter me, Michael! Only a few hours ago you spoke as though you never wanted to think of me again and now I am to be remembered, eh? I am overwhelmed, indeed; but possibly other events may happen soon which will refresh your memory of me still further." Dolores wrapped her sable coat around her, bent an ironic, mysteriously threatening smile upon Michael and departed.

There was nothing left for the baffled Michael to do but take his rage and his pique to his room. Alone there, he brooded over Dolores' words. Was it a threat? Was she trying to strike at him through Paul? Could she harm Paul?

In the first stage of his undressing Michael impatiently drew his watch from his pocket, to place it, as was his wont, on the bureau.

He gave a gasp of astonishment.

The fob with the Yervedoff emerald was gone!

CHAPTER III

In the combined sitting room and kitchen of her little apartment in the Rue Chantignon next afternoon, Colette sat thinking of the events of the night before. What a change, what a difference, from the splendor of Monsieur Michael's dwelling to the shabbiness of her own humble home with its olden furniture, its dreary outlook. Gazing out of the window all Colette could see were the rows upon rows of small, uninteresting houses that are typical of the left bank of the River Seine, the same bleak poverty, the same dour struggle for life, eternally present in each of them—while across the river, in Michael's neighborhood, were wealth, gaiety and happiness.

Well, for one night Colette had had her fling! She smiled, dreamily enraptured by visions of the sumptuous party. And Michael? She wondered what he had thought when he found that "Columbine" had so mysteriously disappeared.

In truth, Colette, herself, hardly knew why she had departed so unceremoniously. It was just a whim to leave at the height of the merry-making so that her memory of it would always be of unalloyed happiness, unsoured by the usual dregs of such cups of careless hilarity.

The door of an adjoining room opened and a curly-headed, brown-eyed little boy of four years ran in and catapulted himself into Colette's lap.

"I don't want to stay in bed now aunty," he said. "'Cause I'm not sleepy. I want to play with you. Can't I get up?" he asked, giving her a slow, clinging hug that contained a strong hint of bribery.

"No, no, Billy! You were up late last night, and your sleep was broken again when the pretty lady came in and showed herself to you in the night. Now, back to bed with you or there will be no bon bons—and no playing in the Bois!"

Billy reluctantly went back to the bedroom in which his small cot was placed close to the protecting side of Colette's plain, single white bed.

To Colette, Billy represented the sum and substance of her life's happiness and pleasure. Her sister had married a worthless scamp, who was too indolent to work and too cunning to be honest. Since her death more than two years before, Colette had taken care of both Billy and his good-for-nothing father. Emile, her brother-in-law, had the third room of the tiny apartment, but he was hardly ever at home—and when he was he treated Billy so harshly, and was so much of a bully in general, that she welcomed his absence.

Luckily, Colette's fingers were nimble enough for her to make a living by fashioning artificial flowers at home. Sometimes Emile turned in a little money but Colette always took it with misgivings, wondering whether or not the money had been earned honestly.

Last night Colette had obtained, for a hard earned franc, the services of a woman on the floor below to sit with Billy while she was out celebrating the Fete. But upon Colette's return, Billy had awakened and had seen her in the Columbine costume.

"What a beautiful lady," he had said gravely, not recognizing his Aunt in the fluffy disguise as he sat up in bed and rubbed his sleepy eyes, "and what did you bring me?"

"Lots of things," Colette had cried, sitting on the bed beside him. "See!—here are apples, raisins, bon bons and this great big balloon. But you must go to sleep again, or you will find them flown by morning!"

Billy had fallen to sleep again, almost immediately with an apple tightly clasped in each hand.

"Well," Colette now chuckled with the brittle matter-of-factness of her kind, "the Fete is over—to work once more! But first, the costume must be packed away."

Crossing to the chair where the shimmering garment of her playhour lay, she started to fold it. As she smoothed out each cherished ruffle, the gleam of a jewel caught her eye. She swiftly turned back the folds of lace, then gave a gasp of astonishment — for the precious stone of Michael's fob, the Yervedoff emerald, was there before her!

"How did it get here?" she kept stammering in frantic nervousness as she untangled the gem and held it up with a trembling hand.

She noticed that the gold clasp, which evidently attached the fob to Michael's watch, had broken. The only solution that presented itself to her was that either when Michael was carrying her to the balcony, or when he was bathing her forehead, it must have caught in her dress.

A torrent of conflicting thoughts washed through her brain. To Michael, that jewel—save for sentimental reasons—meant nothing. He would miss it, yes, but he could easily buy another.

To her, the money for which it could be sold, offered a rare and enticing prospect of clothes, food, and visits to the country, not only for herself but for Billy. Why, the means with which she could realize all the fondest desires of her heart lay now in the palm of her hand—in this flashing emerald!

Then Colette suddenly and resolutely caught herself, and sent the pendulum of her thoughts swinging the other way. Would money thus gained bring happiness? Would it mean happiness if she and Billy were playing in the fields together, chasing butterflies and picking flowers, only to have the thought haunt her that their pleasures had been realized at the price of theft?

ELIZABETH FURNIVALL, single at 40, becomes Barbara's friend at the Footlights office. She is hurt when Barbara moves to Greenwich Village on the advice of MARIA CAPRI, free verse writer. Maria steals diamond rings, left Barbara by her mother, and goes to Paris.

DAISY OLIVERO, actress, invites Barbara to a party. That day Miss Furnivall does not come to work. Barbara goes to see if she is ill. As she opens the door a rush of gas meets her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER LII

SOMETHING lay on the floor, where the light met the shadow.

Barbara took a step forward and stooped fearfully to look at it. Then she screamed and tore the door open. As she burst into the hall a woman passing stopped and stared at her.

Barbara clapped one hand to her eyes and pointed with the other toward the room behind her. "What's the matter?" asked the woman, crossly.

"It's Miss Furnivall. She's dead. I saw her." Barbara was leaning against the wall, her hand still over her eyes, her body shaking violently.

"What?" gasped the woman, running to the door. Barbara moved away in horror as she opened it and went inside. In a moment, the woman came back, with a sober face. "She's dead, all right. Gas, I guess. But heavens, how she looks!"

"Don't, please!" Barbara sat weakly down on the top step, trying to hold her body still. Her hands twitched. "Can't you get a doctor or someone?"

The woman answered indifferently. "It won't do any good. But I'll do it. The coroner is the right person to call, though." Then, as she caught sight of Barbara's white face. "Was she a relative of yours?"

"No, just a friend. But it's terrible to see her so."

"Yep, death by gas doesn't leave a person a thing of beauty, certainly. I'll go telephone. You'd better notify the custodian, if you can find him."

When she had gone, Barbara sat a moment on the step, her eyes turned away from the door, which stood slightly ajar.

She glanced over her shoulder once, jumped to her feet and ran down the stairs and out into the street. Her breakneck speed attracted the glances of passersby, and Barbara slowed her steps to a fast walk.

Miller was just closing the upstairs door when she rushed up the steps of the Footlights building.

"Why, what's the matter, Miss Hawley?" he inquired, chewing the inevitable cigar. "Did you forget something?"

"Open the door again and come back in," gasped Barbara. The man obeyed, leading the way into the reception room of the Footlights suite. He stared at her haggard face.

"Miss Furnivall!" said Barbara. "She's dead. I found her on the floor."

The cigar dropped out of Miller's mouth to the floor. "Dead?" He sat down on the edge of the table and stared at Barbara. "What killed her?"

Barbara lifted her eyes to his. "She killed herself. The room was full of gas. She hadn't even locked the door. Anyone could have saved her. But there wasn't anyone."

Miller rubbed his hands together nervously. "Are you sure she was dead? Did you call anyone?"

Barbara nodded. "She was dead—horrible. I can't talk about it. But oh, if only I had been nicer to her. She died of loneliness, I know. There wasn't anybody to open that door, till I came along and did it, too late." She put her head down on her arms and sobbed.

Miller looked at her helplessly. At last he said, "I'll get a taxicab for you, Miss Hawley. You'd better run along home. And I'll go over to the place myself and see if there's anything to be done."

Barbara did not answer, but when he came back from the street with the announcement that a car was waiting, she wiped her eyes and rose to go.

"Did she have any family, Miss Hawley? We ought to notify them."

"I don't think so," answered Barbara. "She never spoke of anyone."

Miller shook his head and led her to the door.

• • •

Barbara's apartment was dark when she entered it. The maid had forgotten to lay the fires in the fireplaces. Barbara switched on all the lights and went into her bedroom. The place was very still.

She came out hurriedly and began to prepare the wood for a fire herself. The flames went out again and again, until at last she sat, leaning against the andiron, too listless to try again.

The room, with its blaze of lights, was even emptier than her bedroom. The furniture stood stiffly about. Nobody had touched the music on the piano since she left it there several days before. A faucet dripping in the kitchen marked off the silence with its monotonous beat.

Barbara rose to her feet and looked around the room. Then she ran to the window and flung it open, to admit a rush of cold air. Sounds from the street entered. She breathed deeply, standing by the window. Then she walked to the piano and let her hand fall, palm downward, on the keys. The clash of notes rang through the rooms, shivering the stillness that hung in them.

Barbara ran into her bedroom and threw open the closet door. An evening dress of cloth of gold hung just inside. She pulled it out and threw it across the narrow bed.

She dived into the dressing table drawers and brought out lingerie and sheer hose. She glanced at the little clock on the table and saw that it was seven-thirty. She ran into the bathroom and turned on the hot water in the tub.

An hour later, Barbara emerged from the bedroom. She was wearing the cloth of gold dress, and her hair was twisted high.

A glass of milk served for her dinner, though she had not eaten since noon.

• • •

Lamps burned softly in Daisy Olivero's studio apartment. Someone was playing the piano and a group of people chattered in low voices at the other end of the room.

Barbara entered, casting a glance around her. The scene made her eyes sparkle. Daisy advanced to meet her. "Hello, there, Miss Hawley. So you did come. I thought you'd probably scorn our Bohemian revels. But welcome home! Maria was right when she said you were a born Villager. You look it tonight."

Barbara laughed. "I've had a bad day. I've come to be cheered up. Please cheer me up, somebody." She looked around in mock distress.

A tall man rose from his place on the divan. He had the blue eyes and dark hair of the Northern Italian, and the finely molded features of the universal aristocrat. He came toward Barbara smiling lazily.

"You are very beautiful," he said. "I will be your squire and protect you from these wild beasts." He shrugged a shoulder toward the group he had left. "They are talking of Rodin—silly fools, when they might be looking at you."

Barbara stared at him. Daisy interposed. "Never mind Ramon Donizelli, Miss Hawley. He's a notorious flirt. Can't believe a word he says." She gave him a spiteful glance, but Ramon only shrugged and smiled at Barbara.

She took his arm and they approached the chattering group. Two girls in black evening dresses sat on cushions on the floor by the divan. One of them was resting her head against the knee of a handsome youth in a green smock, as she blew smoke rings from the end of a long cigaret.

"Fellow fools," said the young man at her side, "this is Miss Hawley. Daisy didn't bother to tell me her first name, but I'll bet it's Guinevere. She's such a queenly person."

Barbara's face was red. "Nonsense," she exclaimed. "My name is Barbara. That ought to be a good Village name."

"Yes," cried Daisy. "It means an outlaw, someone beyond the pale. It's a lovely name. And this is Marthe Duval, and this is Joan Summers and there are Dr. Piquet, with the decanter, and Thomas Higgins in the smock—though he'd like to be called Jacques or Alexander. We're a rum crew, but we hope you'll like us."

Barbara nodded to the persons introduced and sat down beside the smocked Mr. Higgins. The talk went on. The girls puffed at their cigarets and sipped from tall glasses. Daisy walked about from one end of the room to another, like a caged lioness. Now and then one or two more guests would come in and join one of the groups.

Ramon's clear eyes were upon her always. She smiled at him half shyly once or twice, and drew back from the increased fervor of his gaze.

Daisy went out to the kitchen to see to the refreshments, and Barbara followed her. "I'd like to help, if I may," she said.

Daisy answered lightly, "All right, if you want to. But there isn't much to do. Say, old dear, what a killing you've made. Ramon has been looking sheep's eyes at you all evening. He seldom falls so utterly that he can't flirt with two or three at once. Let me congratulate you." Her voice was acid.

Barbara carried the plates and napkins into the studio. Daisy followed with a tray. The guests sat up expectantly and the chatter died down, as Daisy served the salad and sandwiches and poured the coffee.

Ramon had disappeared from the group by the couch when Barbara went to the kitchen. She looked for him when she had finished passing the sandwiches.

Barbara sat down her plate of sandwiches and passed the table. Around the shoulders of a man and woman standing by it, she saw Ramon appear at the other end. He leaned furtively behind the man and woman and stretched a hand toward the table.

Barbara stepped forward. He was dipping his fingers in the salad bowl. His eyes were greedy.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

HELEN AND HER PARTNER BEATEN IN BITTER GAME

"Little Poker Face" is Forced to Carry the Brunt of Attack

Nice, France, Feb. 8—Helen Wills, champion of American women tennis players, met Suzanne Lenglen, French title holder, across the net for the first time here Sunday afternoon and lost the mixed doubles match after the fastest and most bitter battle in the history of the Riviera, and before the largest crowd of the season.

Centering their savage attack on America's three time champion, Miss Lenglen and the Baron de Morpurgo, champion of Italy, defeated Miss Wills and Charlies Aeschliman, the giant Swiss star, by scores of 6—1 and 6—2.

The match was played in perfect sunny tennis weather. It gave the first real comparison of the two greatest women tennis players of the world. Miss Wills, stolid, silent, white faced as a ghost, fought with lion hearted courage, but was no match for the slashing, flashing Suzanne.

Helen's Strategy Fails

After the first two games, which experts and stars agreed were the fastest and most brilliant they had ever seen, Helen took a puzzling gamble. She abandoned the hard driving game with her famed forehand and backhand drives, which she hits harder than any other woman. She adopted a soft, lobbing attack, but she was lobbing against the greatest overhead smasher among women players and one of the most brutal net players in Europe. Her strategy failed.

Helen and Suzanne entered the court close together, amid thunderous cheers from the cosmopolitan crowd. The match was halted ten minutes while the champions of America and Europe posed, standing stiffly and coldly beside each other, for a battalion of motion picture men and news photographers.

Helen was wearing her usual prim school girl middy blouse, starched and pleated, a pleated skirt and her famous eye shade, while Mlle. Suzanne was garbed in the flimsiest silken creation of the most renowned of the Paris coutouriers, with a ramon pink sweater and bondeau.

Suzanne's Smile Frozen

Throughout the match Mlle. Lenglen was charging along on tiptoes, like a high strung thoroughbred racehorse, while Miss Wills walked flatfooted, as an Indian or detective.

Suzanne wore a fixed frozen smile and talked constantly with her partner, Baron de Morpugo. Miss Wills, pale and tightlipped, was the Coolidge of tennis. Charlie Aeschliman, wearing a Wills eyeshade, was grim, playing every ball viciously and reminding one of Jack Dempsey when he crawls into the rope to defend his title.

The Lenglen-de Morpugo team won the toss so the Baron served. The game went deuce, featured by brilliant hailies before Baron de Morpurgo won the service.

Miss Wills served the second game and lost it after twice deucing. Charlie Aeschliman smashed shots at the net like a boxer with the killer instinct, trying for a knockout in the first round.

Suzanne Loses Service

The first two games electrified the crowd by their brilliancy and savage speed. Except for occasional burst of applause from the most blase of the tennis players, one could hear a pin drop.

In the third game the mighty Suzanne served. The Wills-Aschliman combination, playing like demons, took four straight points, giving Mlle. Suzanne the humiliation of losing her own vaunted service by a love score.

The break of the match came in the fourth game, which the Lenglen-De Marpurgo team won after three times deuce and after Miss Wills and Mr. Aeschliman had twice held the advantage. Helen then evaded trading punches in the hot drives with Mlle. Lenglen and started a lobbing campaign which the sparkling Suzanne and husky DeMorpurgo slaughtered, taking the first set, 6—1, after three last winning games.

Baron Breaks Racquet

In the second set the Wills-Aeschliman team, amid a tornado of hand clapping, won the first game, but Suzanne paid with a tied score when she centered some whistling drives into Miss Wills' field.

Miss Wills won her own service with a love score, largely by direct smashing at Mlle. Lenglen, who drove out-side twice and netted once.

Suzanne got her revenge and tied the score in the next game by sending two perfect placement shots whizzing past Miss Wills' outstretched racquet.

In the next game the pace was so swift Baron de Morpurgo's racquet was bent by the terrific smashing against Miss Wills' lobs. The baron rushed off the courts to get a new racquet.

Victors Greet Losers

The Lenglen-De Morpurgo combination continued their victorious march, winning the next four games and match by crucifying Helen's lobs while shooting their own drives almost entirely at Miss Wills.

At the final point Suzanne hurled a handful of balls with which she had been serving into the stands, rushed to the net, and, smiling frigidly, gave Miss Wills a clammy handshake. Mr. Aeschliman, with his fighting jaw still sticking out six inches, touched Baron de Morpurgo's hand, but both men turned their heads aside while shaking hands.

Miss Wills murmured a faint "Thank you," and left the courts before Charlie Aeschliman could shake hands.

Point Scores of Sets

The points in summary are as follows:

First set:

Lenglen-de Morpugo 5 6 0 7 4 4 4—30
Lenglen-De Morpurgo 4 6 0 4 4 4 7 4—33
Wills-Aeschliman ....3 4 4 5 1 1 2—20

Second set:

Lenglen-de Morpurgo 4 6 0 4 4 4 7 4—33
Wills-Aeschliman .....6 4 4 1 1 2 5 2—25

"The first two games of the first set were the hardest I have ever seen or played in my entire career," Mlle. Lenglen said after the match. "I am happy I scored such an overwhelming victory over Miss Wills, who is a splendid player, a great champion, and fine sportsman. The score does not indicate how close and how hard fought every point was."

"Mlle Lenglen is certainly a marvelous payer—just as good as I have been informed from reading and hearing about her," Miss Wills said. "My partner and I played our best and fought every stroke, but we could not win."

Partner Praises Helen

"Miss Wills carried the brunt of the Lenglen-De Morpurgo attack and played brilliantly—she is just too modest to say so," said Charlie Aeschliman. "I am proud to have had the honor of playing with her. It was the fastest, most gruelling match I ever hope to play in."

Sunday morning Miss Wills added another silver cup to her collection when, with Sileen Bennett, the English beauty, she won the finals in the women's doubles, defeating Miss Emily Wright and Mrs. R. E. Hallock, 6—3, 6—2.

On the strength of Sunday's comparison of Mlle. Lenglen and Miss Wills on the court together, betting odds were boosted eight to one that Mlle. Lenglen will beat the Californian in the coming Carlton tournament.

ROCK FALLSE TOO FAST FOR DIXON IN HARD BATTLE

Bowers' Boys Dropped Second Game of the Week End

Dixon's high school basketball team suffered another humiliation at Rock Falls Saturday night when they went against one of the strongest teams of the conference and lost a hard fought game by a score of 24 to 20. Pignatelli's absence from the Rock Falls quintet was not noticeable to the Dixon fans and students who accompanied the team. Rock Falls played a fast and consistent game from the very first whistle and ran up a big lead on Dixon in the first half when the count stood 16 to 8 in their favor.

The Dixon basket shooters took a new lease on life in the third quarter and played Rock Falls a surprise game, but it was too late and the winners of the contest were taking no chances and managed to keep a safe distance ahead until time was called. Dixon played one of the best games of the season, but was pitted against a strong team.

Abilities of "Big Ten" Basket Ball Teams Uneven

Chicago, Feb. 8—(AP)—With about a third of the Western Conference basketball season over, the offensive and defensive abilities of the teams are shown to be very uneven. While Wisconsin is in the lead for the time with three games won and one lost, it is fourth in scoring ability and fifth in defensive strength. Indiana tied for second place with Ohio and Michigan, is on a par with Northwestern which shares last place in the percentage column with Minnesota in tallying strength, each averaging 32 points. Purdue, in third place is second in scoring with an average of 30. The others rang for average scoring as follows: Wisconsin 29½; Michigan 27 2-3; Ohio 25½; Iowa 20 6-7; Minnesota 20; Illinois 20; Chicago 16 6-7;

On defense the standing is almost reversed, as Chicago comes first, having allowed its opponents to tally an average of 19 2-7 while Ohio is second with 21 1-3 while Illinois a close third with 21½. The others rank: Iowa 23 2-7; Wisconsin 24 3-4; Minnesota 26 1-5; Michigan 26 1-3; Purdue 27 4-5; Indiana 30 5-6; Northwestern 33.

Five Skating Records of World Broken at Detroit

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8—(AP)—Five worlds records fell in the international speed skating championship on Lake St. Clair, which closed here yesterday. Clas Thunberg of Finland, Olympic champion, set two of the marks and Leila Brooks, Toronto made a record, believed to be unique, when she bettered three world's marks in the women's division.

Thunberg, who raced against time because he was unable to accustom himself to the American style of competition, cut 1 2-5 seconds from the three quarter mile record of 2:02 1-5 held by Joe Moore of New York and lowered the mile a half mark to 4.27 2-5.

The 440 yard, the 880 yards and mile records were broken by Miss Brooks. She sped the quarter mile in 44 2-5, taking 2 3-5 seconds from the record held by Gladys Robinson. She then made the half mile in 1:36 3-5 which was 1 2-5 seconds faster than her own former record and in her last appearance she cut 23 2-5 seconds off another record made by Miss Robinson when she covered the mile in 3:33 2-5.
